A. Essential services are defined as follows in the order of importance:

III. Work Assignments During the COVID-19 Emergency

A. Employees Currently Performing Non-Essential Services

Employees who are currently not assigned to perform essential services, as defined in Part II of this guidance are designated “employees currently performing non-essential services.” If their presence at the worksite is necessary for the performance of an essential service, they may be designated by NYCHA as an employee providing essential service. For example, an administrative employee who performs a task for an essential service that cannot be made accessible to the employee’s home, may be designated as an employee currently providing essential service.

All personnel currently performing non-essential services are expected to perform work remotely in accordance with the terms of NYCHA’s Emergency Telework Policy. They are required to complete all work assignments which they are assigned by NYCHA and which they have the technological capacity to perform at home using personal equipment or equipment provided by NYCHA (e.g., computer, phone, internet access). Those employees may also be re-assigned to perform essential services within NYCHA or by the City in other agencies at a location other than at their home including, but not limited to, emergency services administered by the Department of Education, such as Regional Enrichment Centers, food services sites, and nursing care sites for vulnerable students, as circumstances require.

Designation of an employee as performing non-essential services is temporary and may change to essential as the COVID-19 emergency develops. An employee who refuses to perform assigned work or to obtain equipment provided by NYCHA to perform assigned work shall be charged accrued leave and may be subject to discipline. An employee designated as currently performing non-essential services who in the rare circumstance is unable to work remotely because of inadequate equipment or lack of assignment shall be granted excused leave with pay without charge to leave accruals.

B. Employees Currently Performing Essential Services

1. Employees currently performing essential services are required to work at home or other alternate location if NYCHA has determined that is feasible pursuant to the NYCHA’s telework plan implemented in accordance with NYCHA’s Emergency Telework Policy, dated March 15, 2020.

  - a. Such employees performing essential services who exhibit symptoms of COVID-19 that are not due to a pre-existing condition must stay home.
